President Obama has made the first significant statement in his administration on climate change.

On Friday, President Obama announced a new executive order that will require the Environmental Protection Agency to propose regulations to limit carbon dioxide emissions from power plants by 2016. The order also directs the agency to propose rules to curb greenhouse gas emissions from new and existing oil and gas wells and refineries by 2016.

The new executive order, "The Executive Order on Climate Change," is intended to combat climate change and promote energy efficiency and renewable energy.

Concurrence and Social Justice and Associate

Services, the local government and the Department of Energy.

On September 1, 2018, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) proposed a rule to limit greenhouse gas emissions from new power plants. The proposal is part of the agency's efforts to combat climate change and promote energy efficiency and renewable energy.

The proposed rule would require new power plants to limit their greenhouse gas emissions to no more than 1,000 pounds of CO₂ per megawatt-hour. The rule is expected to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 12 percent by 2030.
